techUK

National Security Programme

techUK's National Security programme aims to lead the debate on new and emerging technologies which present opportunities to strengthen UK national security but also expose vulnerabilities which threaten it.

Through a variety of market engagement and policy activities, it assesses the capability of these technologies against various national security threats, developing thought-leadership on topics such as procurement, innovation, diversity and skills.

Programme Value Proposition

Industry Access
techUK brings together a broad community of tech companies working across the National Security sector including large manufacturers, consultancies and innovative SMEs. The programme helps to develop critical relationships between key customers in the secure government space and cutting-edge technology companies, facilitated through regular briefings, workshops and webinars sessions hosted by techUK.

Influence Policy
Led by an elected National Security Committee, the National Security Programme works to influence policy development across the secure government space. The Programme champions the views and concerns of members on policy issues which have a direct impact on business in the sector. This engagement helps members to strengthen their influence, raise their profile, and create the best environment for growth and policy making in the UK.

Inside Track
techUK provides members with the opportunity to understand and shape future digital and technology business opportunities across the secure government space. Through a strategic partnership in the secure government ecosystem, techUK members are provided with insight into current technological challenges facing key national security government customers and are able to submit proposals for solutions.

Impact Performance
techUK market engagement activities provide members with the necessary insight to make informed decisions which lead to successful business outcomes. Our policy work helps to shape a positive regulatory and legislative environment in the security and resilience sectors for technology companies, ensuring their voices are heard across government and their views are considered by senior policy makers and decision makers, mainly within Cabinet Office and UK Home Office.

Return on Investment
For companies already working in the secure government space or aspiring to do so, the Programme provides members with access to key stakeholders and market insight that is not readily available publicly. Members can successfully align their own investment and resources to take advantage of business opportunities and can influence policy development to help reduce costs and risks to business.

Get in touch

Email: membership@techuk.org | Telephone: 020 7331 2026